THE MAJOR:

Sociology is the study of how organizations, institutions and society as a whole operate and change. It is the study of human interaction and the variations of human behavior within a culture. Sociologists study contemporary topics such as race relations, the family in a changing society, gender roles, environment, population, poverty, crime and the criminal justice system, religion, education and more. Sociologists work with psychologists, historians, anthropologists and geographers, among others, to understand society's organization, controls, groups, problems and change.
