 - c. Faculty Prioritization Process Overview

Dean McEwen discussed the faculty prioritization process, explaining that it is "prioritization Lights" season due to a budget crunch. She clarified that the process involves faculty members from leadership councils voting on faculty hiring priorities, with an information session scheduled for the following day from 12:30 to 2:00 PM. Dean McEwen emphasized that faculty should vote as representatives of their divisions and confirmed that voting would occur via an MS form link to be sent out shortly. She also mentioned that the college typically receives new faculty positions from the state, and this process allows for transparency in prioritizing those hires.

d. Strategic Planning and Prioritization Initiatives

This portion of the meeting focused on two main topics: prioritization initiatives and the 2025-2030 strategic planning process. McEwen explained that due to tight budgets, the presidential leadership team has put prioritization initiatives on hold and is exploring alternative funding sources, including restricted lottery funds. The group then discussed the strategic plan, which includes 9 goals with specific objectives. McEwen assigned 6 objectives to the SAS Leadership Council to lead, focusing on areas like student onboarding and success teams. The council agreed to meet with McEwen to discuss work assignments and timelines, with a goal of having tasks assigned by next month. Carranza raised the topic of early alert processes, suggesting a future discussion on integrating these systems with the strategic plan, and Dean English provided context on the early stages of Element 451, which aims to improve case management for Ed. advisors and counselors.
